Thank you, Brianna. I'll forward this.

This is my last contact. I don't mean to burden you personally.

Whether I've misinterpreted any events or caught everyone in a lie is not the point. I've suffered before, during, and after Puzzle. I've worked with many people in my life and have never met such shameless people who can't own up to their mistakes in life. People who can't treat me with an ounce of dignity without brushing aside the very real things I've found and questioned. People who have no idea how to de-escalate a situation if it means they have to look inward for once in their lives. Refusing to acknowledge a single word while shuffling behind the scenes, setting up meetings without talking to me directly, stalking me, and trying to shut me up with money... It was ultimately a failure of their collective character and the exact type of brainwashing that is destroying the world every second. Their "emotional distress" is a mere fraction of what I've gone through.

Everyone failed me. That's their karma to deal with. I'm not making threats. I'm not a violent person. I'm moving on as of today. This wound has festered long enough.

Take care,
Patrick

I confirmed with Cal Choice that your coverage is terminated. There was an issue in Anthem's system reloading your eligibility which likely caused UHC to think you were covered by Anthem. Anthem confirmed that your benefits ended as of May 31, 2023. I have attached the letter confirming your cancellation of coverage. You can provide this to UHC and this should serve as proof that you were not enrolled in Anthem after May 31, 2023.

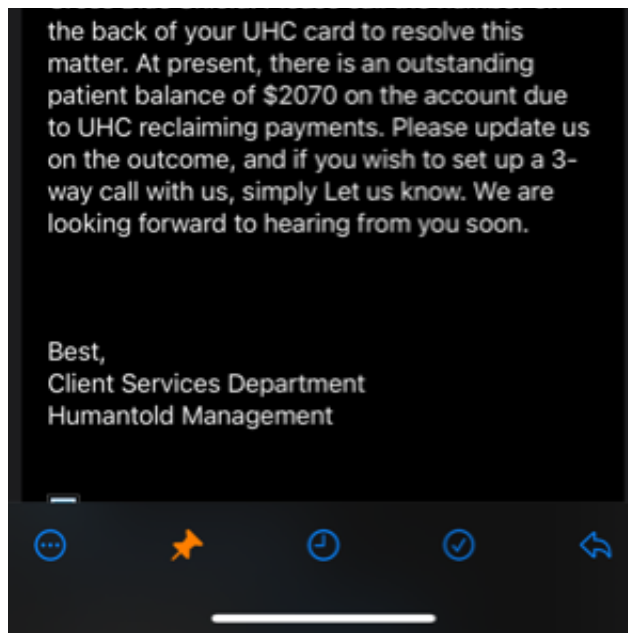

Best,

If I was "laid off," I never even filed for unemployment. I'm beyond pissed off at you all.

I'm writing to inform you that Puzzle has thrown a wrench in my insurance situation that is out of alignment with anything that was communicated around my "departure."

Anthem says I was laid off and have continued receiving insurance as an employer benefit. Execs told my coworkers I voluntarily resigned, made everyone think I'm crazy, and I never even used this insurance again because none of you ever communicated with me outside of sending me a cease and desist letter.

You already revoked my equity and caused me endless damage to my mental health. Giving me insurance to wipe your hands clean of everything is psychotic. Stop playing with people. I once again wish I never joined Puzzle. Don't do this with people.

Patrick
